NO	SCENARIO	CATEGORY
1	An employee receives an email from “HR Department” asking to verify their login details via a link.	Threat
2	A company server is running Windows Server 2012, which no longer receives security updates.	Vulnerability
3	A developer accidentally uploads API keys to a public GitHub repository.	Vulnerability
4	A hacker uses a botnet to flood a website with traffic until it becomes unavailable.	Threat
5	The firewall in a branch office is misconfigured to allow all inbound traffic.	Vulnerability
6	An insider copies confidential customer data onto a personal USB drive.	Threat
7	The organization’s password policy allows users to set “12345” as their password.	Vulnerability
8	Cybercriminals send ransomware through email attachments to multiple employees.	Threat
9	A company website doesn’t validate user input in its contact form, allowing malicious SQL commands	Vulnerability
10	Attackers use fake job advertisements on social media to trick users into sharing personal data	Threat